Columbia Back Safely After Delay In Landing Technical Failures Force Shuttle to Use Back-Up Systems

Like the 10-day science mission before it, which had munerous mean-failures but finally ended as a success for the billion-dollar Enropean-designed and built Spacelab, last-minute adjustments turned the thuttle's landing at Edwards Air Force Base into a smooth one. Engineers and computer special-ists spent hours simulating the pos-sible ways the instruments might have failed and could come to nofinal conclusion by landing time.

But they did determine that the cause originally suspected - a toopowerful thruster firing -- was not at fault.

Though one computer and one navigational device remained down, the thrusters were fired several times in orbit while the backup machines were running and no problems appeared.

The ship's safe landing with its six crew members came after about 10 auxious hours during which ground teams raced to diagnose the failures and work out new computer and hardware arrays. The fright still had a large margin-of safety, since there were several backup systems behind those that

U.S., Allies Agree to Stay in Lebanon To Back Moves Toward Reconciliation

By Bernard Gwertzman

New York Times Service BRUSSELS — The United States and its three allies in the multinational peacekeeping force in Lebaton said Thursday that they would remain indefinitely to press for a broadly based Lebanese government and the withdrawal of Israeli and Syrian forces

After a one-hour meeting with Secretary of State George P. Shultz, France's foreign minister, Claude Cheysson, said it would be "com-pletely irresponsible" for the Brit-ish, French, Italian and U.S. troops in the multinational force to pull out now or cut back their role.

"We do not want to give the impression that we would abandon the Lebanese," he said.

A participant in the talks said that the Bruish and Italians, under growing criticism in their commics. were note "Aritish" than the U.S. and French; but all their commics drastically changed its role.

A U.S. official said the four nations "emphasized that the mission of the MNF is one of peace and of improving stability and to establish conditions under which Lebanon can recover its full independence and integrity. And they agreed that the main two priorities are national reconciliation in Lebanon and withdrawal of foreign forces. And obviously all four countries will do all in their power to promote this." France, Italy and the United States each have about 2,000 sol-

BUENOS AIRES - Top policynaking authorities of the incoming government of Raul Alfonsin have inked Argentina's potential accep-tance of international safeguards on its nuclear facilities to assistance by the United States and other Western countries regarding its claim to the Falkland Islands, according to sources here.

The incoming foreign minister, Dante Caputo, who will formally head the advisory commission, said in a statement Monday that the law would be designed to ensure "the most close and strict control" of the nuclear program so that it is directed to "exclusively peaceful ends in the use of atomic energy."

Radical Party leaders also say privately that the new government might be willing to satisfy appeals by the United States and the Intertional Atomic Energy Agency that Argentina allow international inspections and other safeguards of all of its nuclear facilities, including a plant for the enrichment of urani-

U.S. Aides Say Andropov Is Back at Work

By Hedrick Smith

New York Times Service WASHINGTON - U.S. officials say that Western diplomats have sported Yuri V. Andropov being driven to work in the Kremlin after an absence since mid-August.

The Soviet leader's limousine and security convoy were first observed going into the Kremlin one afternoon in the middle of last week, the officials said Wednesday.

On Monday and Tuesday, they said. Mr. Andropov's convoy was again seen going in the mornings from his apartment to the Kremlin through the Borovitsky Gate and returning home in late afternoon. Mr. Andropov was also personally dentified as being in the Kremlin.

The United States has taken Mr. Andropov's reappearance as evidence that he has recovered sufficiently from ill health to attend a Central Committee meeting expected on Dec. 26 and a session of the Supreme Soviet, the nominal parliament, starting Dec. 28.

Some officials speculated that Mr. Andropov might meet with a foreign leader before that date as a way of appearing in public. He has not made such an appearance since Aug. 18, when he received a group

Russia Suspends Geneva Talks on Intercontinental Nuclear Forces

By William Drozdiak

GENEVA -- The Soviet Union on Thursday suspended the negotiations on limiting intercontinental nuclear weapons with the United States, saying that the deployment of Pershing-2 and cruise missiles in Europe has changed "the overall strategic situation."

During a 35-minute meeting at the Soviet mission, the chief Soviet negotiator, Viktor P. Karpov, told his U.S. counterpart, Edward L. Rowny, that Moscow felt compelled to review all issues under discussion at the Geneva talks and could not set a resumption date for the next round.

In a statement, Mr. Rowny exressed regret over the Soviet action. He said he proposed that both delegations meet in early February and that he hoped the Soviet Union would soon agree on a date for resuming these negotiations which are in the interest of both our nations and of the entire world.

"We cannot agree with Soviet sertions that developments outside the scope of these negotiations require the Soviet Union to withold agreement on a resumption date for the sixth round of START,"
Mr. Rowny said. START stands for Strategic Arms Reduction

In Moscow, Soviet sources said that while the talks have been suspended they have not been broken off. They said Moscow expected to resume negotiations next year. The Soviet Union has now broken off two sets of nuclear arms talks with the United States after the arrival of Pershing-2 and cruise missiles in Europe.

U.S. officials said they were neither surprised nor alarmed by the Soviet suspensions, which they characterized as part of an escalaiing campaign of "fear tacties" to intimidate European countries from fulfilling Western plans to in-stall the new Western missiles during the next five years.

solidated at the forthcoming Com-munist Party plenum on Dec. 28. The Russians might then choose to launch a new initiative to recoup public support in Europe at the European disarmament conference in Stockholm, set to begin Jan. 17.

"They will now clearly aim to instill fear and worry in the Europeans," a U.S. official said. "We must LIV to meet those concerns but not fall for Soviet propaganda." The U.S. delegation at the talks on strategic arms viewed the Soviet walkout Thursday with equanimity if only because Moscow has not closed any doors but rather tried to retain many options, including the possibility of accepting the U.S. offer to continue the arms talks in

"The Soviets have calculated that they do not lose anything by going home right now," a U.S. offi-cial said. "They did the least they can do if all they want is to reassess the arms talks."

U.S. officials said the Soviet delegates "did not even bite" at President Ronald Reagan's latest "build down" proposal that calls for both sides to reduce their nuclear arsenals of ballistic missile warheads by roughly one-third to 5,000 apiece.

"We don't think they have even decided how to answer our proposal," a U.S. official said. "They are clearly uncomfortable about the figure of 5,000 warheads." In turn, the Soviet Union offered to cut the number of launchers on both sides to 1,800, lumping landbased missiles together with aircraft and submarine forces where the U.S. maintains superiority.

■ Not a Walkout, Reagan Says

The Soviet Union did not break off the Strategic Arms Reduction Talks, Mr. Reagan said Thursday, it "simply was not prepared to set a time for resumption of talks. United Press International reported from Washington.

By David Stevens International Herald Tribune

DARIS — "Callas: An Inter-I national Celebration," a mostly live entertainment being pulled together by satellite on Sunday from four opera houses on two continents, is billed as a tribute to the late soprano, commemorating the 60th anniversary of her birth.

The real tribute to Callas is that there probably is no other operatic artist, quick or dead, whose name could have been the magic word that made possible such a complicated enterprise, obtain the more-or-less selfless cooperation of four major opera theaters and the unpaid participation of some of the leading singers in the world.
This is all possible because of

The singers are all people who sang with Callas, or wish they had and because of that are willing to sublimate their egos."

Callas is the "glue" partly because her tempestuous personal life made her famous beyond the confines of opera fandom, but also because her influence as an artist revived a whole category of forgotten bel canto masterpieces that remain in the repertory, and her art in conveying the dramatic power of music has left the operatic world in her debt.

But Gelb, who at 30 is too voting to have seen Callas on stage except during her lamentable concert tour with Giuseppe di Stefano a decade ago, is not interested in nostalgia trips. "Bor-ing," is Gelb's dismissal of most serious music programming on WASHINGTON — A $500,000 bribe payment to an Internal Revenue Service agent, the largest in the tax agency's history, has been disclosed by the IRS commissioner, Roscoe L. Egger Jr., who said the the payment's size illustrates the enormity of illegal tax-shelter schemes in the United States.

Klein, a revenue agent based in West Palm Beach, Florida had secretly cooperated with IRS inspectors in accepting the money from two promoters of a multimilliondollar tax-shelter program that authorities suspect is fraudulent. Mr. Klein's work led to the arrest of two businessmen, Virgil Lovell and Charles Hara, from whom he received more than $500,000 after Mr. Egger said at a news confer-alerting his superiors to the bribe ence Wednesday that Myron M. offer, Mr. Egger said.

U.S. Studies Moving Marines in Beirut to Safer Area

By Richard Halloran

New York Times Service WASHINGTON - The Joint Chiefs of Staff have begun drafting plans to redeploy the U.S. Marines in Beirut away from the airport to safer ground in Lebanon or to am-phibious craft offshore, administration officials said Wednesday.

Officials said the plans had not yet reached the National Security Council, where they would be dis-cussed with President Ronald Reagan, but that the idea would be welcomed there. They said no consideration was being given to with-

The Joint Chiefs of Staff have never been enthusiatic about the dispatch of the marines to Lebanon because they have feared getting caught in a quagmire from which there would be no easy extraction.

In October 1982, just after the marines arrived in Beirut, the chairman of the Joint Chiefs, General John W. Vessey Jr., said: "I think it's fair to say that the Joint Chiefs don't want to get embroiled in Leb-anon. And I don't think the president of the United States wants to get embroiled in Lebanon." Pentagon officials said General Vessey had not changed his mind and that he spoke for the four other members of the the Joint Chiefs. The officials said the chiefs, including General Paul X. Kelley, commandant of the Marine Corps, thought the position of the marines in Beirut was militarily untenable.

A month ago, General Vessey complained in a televised interview of the slowness of the political process in Lebanon. "Perhaps that's the most irritating thing to us military people, the slowness of getting on with solving the problems politically." he said.

"One has to think through very carefully putting American troops in any kind of an operation where we're using them as a political lever. Certainly, I would urge caution in any such operation.

Reagan Is Set to Upgrade Vatican Ties WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ronald Reagan is prepared to operade diplomatic relations with the Vatican, but a White House pokesman said Thursday that he would "not go as lar" as some reports that say the administration already has told the Holy See it wants to exchange ambassadors.

Larry M. Speakes, the presidential spokesman, noted that Congress recently passed legislation allowing the United States to upgrade its relations with the Varican and said, "We are certainly moving in that direction." Last month, Mr. Reagan signed the legislation, which repealed an 1867 law that barred the use of U.S. funds for maintain liplomatic mission at the Vatican.

Russia Said to Arrest 3 Peace Activists

MOSCOW (UPI) - Police arrested three peace activists Thursday in the first move against their unanthorized Group for Establishing Trust Between the U.S.S.R. and U.S.A. since one of its founders was sentenced in October to six years of prison and exile, said Dr. Yuri Medvedkov, a member of the group.

Dr. Medwedkov said that those arrested were being investigated for failing to obey police orders while attempting to attend the October trial of a Soviet dissident. He denied the accusation on behalf of the three, who He said that the group's rules call for observance of Soviet laws and More III approved peace committee, which does not deviate from the Soviet position that the United States is responsible for escalating the arms race.

U.S. Education Spending Cut Expected WASHINGTON (NYT) — President Ronald Reagan's 1985 budget proposal for the Department of Education is certain to be below this year's spending level, department officials have said.

Education Secretary T.H. Bell is now revising his budget request for the 1985 fiscal year, which begins next Oct. 1, aides said this week. His initial figures were "way over" the spending target that had been set by the Office of Management and Budget, according to a budget official who. asked not to be identified. Education Department officials said the new proposal, perhaps adjusted to make up for inflation, would fall between the $15.2 billion approved by Congress for this fiscal year and the $13.5 billion onling for next year the administration projected in July. Progress' Over Hong Kong Is Hinted =

A TASTE OF UTOPIA—DEC. 17-JAN. 6, 1984

The World Government of the Age of Enlightenment offered last month to solve the problems of all governments. In the same wave of inspiration, Maharishi International University has now planned to give a sample taste of utopia to all mankind.

Seven thousand experts in the Maharishi Technology of the Unified Field will assemble at MIU from December 17 to January 6 to collectively create a strong influence of coherence and positivity in the whole world.

This unique demonstration of global coherence, originating from one place and reaching all parts of the world, will inspire governments to follow this example in their own countries and create a group of experts in the Maharishi Technology of the Unified Field so that negative trends do not arise in the country, law and order are spontaneously maintained, and administration becomes simple, effective, free from problems, and free from the elements of fear and punishment. Qualities of the Unified Field

Since the unified field is a field of all possibilities, the qualities of the unified field are innumerable. A few of its characteristic qualities are described here in the light of the supergravity theory of quantum physics in order to give a glimpse of the benefits that the technology of the unified field can bring to ndividual and collective life:

1. Perfect Balance—supersymmetry: balance of bose and fermi fields. Invincibility—a gauge field dynamically upholds its own symmetry. Self-referral—the non-Abelian property of self-interaction, 4. Selfsufficiency—a unified gauge field, containing the whole of physics, interacts with itself alone. 5. Infinite Creativity—the fountainhead of natural law: from this unified source, sequential dynamical symmetry breaking gives rise to all the particles and forces of nature. 6. Infinite Dynamism-the quantum fluctuations at the Planck scale express infinite dynamism. 7. Infinite Organizing Power-the Hamiltonian density of the unified field expresses the total dynamics of natural law. 8. All Possibilities—all local gauge invariant operators are generated by the dynamics at the Planck scale. 9. Immortality—time translational invariance of the Lagrangian density of the unified field. 10. Nourishing—the evolutionary process is sustained by the eternal continuum of self-interaction of the unified field.

All beautiful, evolutionary qualities spontaneously blossom in individual and collective life as the mind gains increasing familiarity with the unfilled field. This has been amply verified by extensive scientific research in the areas of physiology, psychology, sociology, and ecology and demonstrated in the lives of millions of people and in the improving quality of national life on all continuous definitions of people and in the improving quality of national life on all continuous definitions. tinents during the past 25 years. These achievements are at the basis of our global initiative to give a sweet taste of utopia to all mankind and to invite our family of nations to collectively create unified field based ideal civilization

The sweet taste of utopia comes as the supreme gift of the Silver Jubilee Celebrations of Maharishi's worldwide Transcendental Meditation movement, 1958 to 1983. Maharishi declared 1983 to be the "Year of the Unified Field." Now, 1984 will be welcomed as the "Year of Unified Field Based Civilization."

As evidence that the Nobel Peace Prize winner was mentally ill, the official asserted that Mr. Sakharov had urged the United States to launch a nuclear strike on the Soviet Union. Western diplomats called the statements preposterous.

Vitaly P. Ruben, chairman of the Chamber of Nationalities in the Supreme Soviet, the country's nominal parliament, spoke at length about Mr. Sakharov during news conference called to extol the Soviet record on human rights before UN Human Rights Day, Saturday. > Asked by Western reporters why Mr. Sakharov had been banished without trial, Mr. Ruben, 69, produced a 10-minute answer that covered the gamut of dissent in the Soviet Union from the official point of view. A Western diplomat who attended the news conference termed it a "stunning improvisation" in Orwellian double-think.

Mr. Ruben's reply was one of the most detailed official explanations on record for Mr. Sakharov's banishment in January 1980, which

Mr. Ruben, at times clasping his hands over his heart, advanced a different point of view. "I have had the opportunity to

Nakasone Support Declines in Survey

TOKYO — A new poll published Thursday, 10 days before Japan's general election Dec. 18, showed a sharp decline in support for Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone's government.

The Fuji News Network said that a survey earlier this week showed that only 32.2 percent of the electorate supported the government, as against 40.9 percent six months ago. It said among the 3,000 voters polled, opposition to Mr. Nakasone's administration rose to 41.2 percent from 34.5 percent recorded in a similar poll in

However, the network's survey showed a smaller decline in support for the ruling Liberal Democratic Party as a whole — to 35.4 percent from 37.6 percent. Support for the main opposition group, the Japan Socialist Party, rose to 16.8 percent

How Costly a Defense?

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger gave fair notice the other day of his plans for the fiscal 1985 budget. He is asking President Reagan to submit to Congress in January a request for a 17-percent increase in real terms. The extra amount, $55 billion on top of the current $257 billion, would recover most of what Congress denied the administration in fiscal 1984 when it granted a 5-percent increase, and would keep the United States on the military growth track Mr. Reagan marked out when he came to office.

Mr. Weinberger made his presentation to Republican leaders in the Senate. They were flabbereasted. Their collective view seemed to be that to propose such a high figure, when almost everything else except interest rates is being cut, would merely invite Congress to sharpen its knife. Another approach being considered elsewhere in the administration, is to pre-shrink the defense request. The consensus is that, notwithstanding Mr. Reagan's success in persuading Congress to support most of an ambitious "rearmament" in his first three years, things may change in the fourth year. We agree. We also suggest that there are two broad ways in which to address the perenaial question of how much defense is enough.

The first is to try to work through a wide range of specific questions concerning military investments. How dangerous a place does the world now seem to be? Is the country's new military power turning out to be helpful to its foreign policy and feelings of safety? How efficiently is the Pentagon spending the money it has? What is the military's proper share of the budget, and of prospective budget cuts? The answers must be vague and subjective, but this is how many of us make up our minds.

A second way to think of defense is to try to balance particular military threats against the resources available to meet them. This is the insider's game, but outsiders also play. In recent years, the Pentagon has profited from a general feeling of alarm about the Soviet military buildup and Soviet policy. But it may be pressed harder next year to justify specific mission and program requests.

The review Congress gives the military budget will no doubt be intensely political Assuming that Mr. Reagan seeks re-election, it will amount to a vote of confidence in his stewardship of the crucial area of federal responsibility. Defense cannot fail to be a hot issue in 1984. It should be.

- THE WASHINGTON POST.

A Hurtful U.S. Parsimony

Hiding behind Congress, the Reagan administration has again rejected pleas to increase U.S. aid to the poorest countries. At negotiations Friday in Paris about expanding the International Development Association, the World Bank's soft-loan affiliate, the United States has decided to offer $750 million a year for three years. That is slightly less than it contributed over the last four years, and much less than is needed.

Since its creation in 1960, this valuable agency has loaned $30 billion to dozens of desperate countries for up to 50 years at no interest. Its clients are the poorest of the poor. nations with per capita incomes of less than $730 a year. Their needs are so great and their economies so weak they cannot afford conventional loans. India was long sustained by IDA loans until it could feed itself. Mankind benefits from achievements of that magnitude.

In arguing for a larger fund, the IDA has amply demonstrated the need. Much of black Africa remains destitute. The world's debt problems have set back all developing countries. And since the last replenishment. China claimant for IDA loans.

In the 1979 replenishment, the Carter administration pledged $3.2 billion over three years. President Reagan stretched that over four years, reducing contributions to $800 million a year. Some of the 32 other sponsor governments made up the shortfall with an emergency fund, but expressed their contempt for American stinginess by barring the fund's use for the purchase of U.S. goods. Thus, Americans may not bid on fertilizers, trucks and other products for a rubber project China is financing with a $60-million IDA loan.

The IDA proposed a new replenishment for which the United States's share would have been $1 billion a year for three years. The administration's misguided response is that less is somehow enough. Besides, it says. Congress would not approve more - even though. right after a bruising battle over contributions to the International Monetary Fund, Congress voted more for the IDA this year than Mr. Reagan would seek next year.

Blaming Congress just will not wash. The White House has always had to show the way on foreign assistance. Given the crushing burdens of the societies that are the IDA's clients, has joined the World Bank and become a and the U.S. role in producing a global recession, to be stingy now is simply irresponsible.

No Scandal in Space

Crewmen on the shuttle Columbia, performing a test of inner ear function in outer space, have probably disproved the hypothesis for which Robert Barany of Sweden received the Nobel Prize in 1914. Is that a scandal?

No, because there are good and bad ways of being wrong. Johannes Fibiger got the Nobel Prize in 1926 for a discovery about cancer that no one has been able to repeat. Probably Fibiger just did the experiment wrong, which does not help anybody. But Barany's hypothesis, an explanation of how heat affects the organ of balance in the inner ear, was subtle enough to have demanded the test in space. Even if false, the idea will have led somewhere. All scientific theories, even those corroborated with Nobel Prize money, are fallible. If not they would be dogma rather than science. But theories may derive substantial credence from the facts they explain. When the Texas state Board of Education, in Austin, requires biology textbooks to warn that evolution "is clearly presented as theory rather than fact," it demonstrates a wonderful ignorance about the role of theories in science.

Of course evolution is no mere fact: It is a theory that draws its strength from billions of facts. But Barany's hypothesis sought to explain only a single fact, and is vulnerable to a single contradiction. The refutation in space was no scandal. For that, go to Austin.

Other Opinion

The Peacekeepers Stay

Mrs. Thatcher has rightly decided that the 100-strong British contingent of the muitinational peace force will remain in Lebanon. This coincides with reports that the Italian government may decide to cut the size of its contingent. A total British withdrawal would have exposed the French and American contingents, the most battle-hardened, to new dangers and would be acutely embarrassing for President Reagan. Any major weakening of the multinational force could result in the cease-fire collapsing.

Remembering the Cambodians With the arrival of the dry season, Vietnam once again is preparing for a major offensive in yet another endeavor to wipe out the opposition forces in Cambodia. It is doubtful that the Vietnamese will succeed. This is Vietnam's sixth offensive since its troops rumbled across Cambodia in December 1978. Then, indignant cries reverberated in the United Nations. Now, the efforts of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations, though on the surface well-meaning, appear to be no more than an attempt to create a buffer zone between the belligerent Vietnamese and the group of non-Communist countries.

East Germany's Softer Tone In keeping with Moscow's overall policy since it broke off the Euromissile talks. East Germany has adopted a conciliatory tone toward Bonn. Its reasons include its dependence on Western credits to shore up its ailing economy, the fact that the dire forecasts of an impending nuclear holocaust aimed at intimidating the West German public have begun to rebound onto its own population, and the hope of making intra-German mileage out of what it discerns as a loosening of U.S.-German ties. But East Germany has not changed its status as Moscow's outpost.

1908: A Dull Rooseveltian Message WASHINGTON - Washington did not need the President's Message in order to keep awake today [Dec. 8], or rather Washington was awake despite the Message. The city is literally overrun with conventions, congresses, tariff lobbyists and office-seekers. The general consensus of opinion is that Mr. Roosevelt's annual Message is the dullest he ever wrote. The comment is that it reads like the work of a man who knew that his day was done, and who had lost interest and wanted to turn to some new thing. This is literally true. Mr. Roosevelt thinks of little except his African trip. The Message, therefore, lacks originality and cohesiveness. Little attention was paid to the reading of it in either House.

1933: Miss Stein on Art and War

PARIS - Gertrude Stein stepped into the break at the American Women's Club. "Is scrap-iron with buttons on it art?" "Why don't modern artists paint things as they see them?" The two questions came from different parts of the room. "The modern artist is not just trying to astonish. Otherwise no sane person would work for years just to achieve the con-tempt of the public," she said. "Maybe they're not sane!" came a shot from the audience. "Oh, don't be silly!" exclaimed Miss Stein. Most people live in their epoch in that they understand ordinary things such as steam heat and automobiles, but insist upon living in the past, in matters of the intellect. Wars are won before a single shot is fired," she said.

Diplomacy: A Radical Alternative to Euromissiles

PRINCETON. New Jersey — Let 1983 be remembered as the year the Cold Warriors led us, in the name By Stephen F. Cohen of "national security," to the greatest insecurity in the history of American-

Soviet relations. The deployment this month of me-dium-range American missiles in Western Europe is an unnecessary and dangerous act. Its immediate consequence will be the counter-deployment of Soviet missiles much closer to the United States. Its enduring consequence will be to increase the risk of nuclear war through mishap or misperception by intensifying mistrust on both sides.

All of America's underlying national conflicts with the Soviet Union are political in nature, but as a nation Americans have stopped thinking po-litically about any of them. Mainstream American thinking about the Soviet Union has become milita- reflected in the 50-year history of its rized: It focuses only on weapons problems, reasons only in "strategic" terms, finds only military solutions. Americans like to say that politics is the resolution of conflict through national affairs, it is called political diplomacy. But the United States no longer has any diplomatic policies toward the Soviet Union, only "strategic" ones. Indeed, whatever coherpolicy there is, is shaped not by U.S. diplomats, but by the defease secretary and the president's national security adviser — officials whose first premise is military.

The mindless counting of warheads has blinded even ardent opponents of the arms race to the real lesson of the 1970s, now reaffirmed by the breakdown of the Geneva talks: No arms control agreement is possible or stable without broader political-diplomatic agreements.

The abolition of American diplomacy toward the Soviet Union is guiding political idea - detente, or the gradual reduction of conflicts through negotiations instead of military superiority. In 1933, President Roosevelt created the first détente bargaining and compromise. In inter- policy by establishing diplomatic relations with the Soviet Union. In 1953, President Eisenhower began diplomatic talks that ended American-Soviet confrontations in Austria and Korea. In 1963, President Kennedy called for a renewed American-Soviet diplomacy. In 1973, President Nixon's detente policy was still in force. But in 1983, even the word détente is profane in America.

But detente is the only rational political policy in U.S. Soviet relations. Hot war would invite mutual destruction. Cold war has also become irrational, if only because it has entered a stage of missile brinkmanship. And entente, or a U.S.-Soviet alliance as existed during World War II, is impossible, because too many historical, political and cultural dif ferences divide the two nations. All hope for the future therefore requires the rehabilitation of American diplomacy and détente. Bipartisan Cold Warriors rule out that hope, insisting, on the one hand, that the Soviet Union alone "betrayed" dé-

Diplomacy: Tips From Eisenhower

WASHINGTON - Thirty years W ago this week, President Dwight D. Eisenhower delivered his Atoms for Peace speech at the United Nations. Reading it again is a re-minder of the missed opportunities of the past and the bad manners of present U.S.-Soviet diplomacy.

The date was Dec. 8, 1953, the day ter the 12th anniversary of Pearl Harbor, eight years after the atomic bombing of Hiroshima and Nagasaki, and four years after the Soviet Union exploded its first experimental atomic devices.

Eisenhower began his speech by noting that while the United States had a long lead in the development of atomic weapons, other nations had or would soon have the capacity to produce such weapons. And that even a 'vast superiority" in numbers of such weapons was no answer to the nuclear menace.

"Let no one think." he said. "that the expenditure of vast sums for systems and weapons of defense can guarantee absolute safety. The awful arithmetic of the atom bomb does not permit of any such easy solution.

Even against the most powerful defense, an aggressor in possession of even the effective minimum number of atomic bembs for a surprise attack could probably place a sufficient number of his combs on the chosen targets to cause hideous damage."

Eisenhower was careful to warn that should any such attack be launched against the United States, "our reactions would be swift and resolute." But he added that "it is with the book of history and not with isolated pages that the United States will ever wish to be identified."

Then he added a personal note: "For me to say that the defense capabilities of the United States are such that they could inflict terrible losses on an aggressor — for me to say that the retaliation capabilities of the United States are so great that an aggressor's land would be laid waste all this, while fact, is not the true expression of the purpose and hope of the United States."

He then came to his proposals: • The United States was prepared "instantly" and "privately" —he emphasized privacy — to talk to the Soviet Union and all other countries involved "to seek an acceptable solution to the atomic arms race, which overshadows not only peace but the very life of the world.

• He suggested a "new conception." The United States, he said, would seek more than the mere reduction or elimination of atomic materials for military purposes. It is not enough to take this weapon out of the hands of soldiers. It must be put into the hands of those who will know how to strip its military casing and adapt it to the arts of peace."

 Accordingly, he proposed to the Soviet Union (1) a worldwide investigation into the most effective peacetime uses of fissionable materials; (2) a start on the reduction of the world's atomic stockpiles; and (3) a demonstration that the major powers were truly interested in "human aspirations first rather than in building up the armaments of war."

Finally, Eisenhower said: "To the making of these fateful decisions, the United States pledges before you its with the East at the expense of U.S.

determination to help solve the fearful atomic dilemma — to devote its entire heart and mind to find a way by which the miraculous inventiveness of man shall not be dedicated to his death but consecrated to his life."

all this. There is a generosity and civility in this speech we have not heard for a very long time. Eisenhower did not insist on nuclear "superiority" - he had it then and was offering to give it up.

He was careful to avoid recriminations or allocations of blame. "I don't wish," he said, "to rest either upon reiteration of past proposals or the restatement of past ideas. The gravity of the time is such that every new tente in the 1970s, and, on the other hand, that all diplomatic possibilities have been exhausted. Both conten-tions are false. The United States also undercut détente in the 1970s by violating political promises to the Soviet Union, including most-favored-na-tion status in trade and credits, ratification of SALT-2, and a neutralist policy toward China. Nor have diplomatic approaches to U.S.-Soviet conflicts been exhausted. Most have not even been tried. In the Middle East, for example, the United States has ousted the Soviet Union from negotiations, but no political settlement is possible without its participation. A Soviet negotiating role should be conceded in return for recognition of Israel by Syria and the Palestine Liberation Organization.

In China policy, the United States has inflamed Soviet military anxieties and outraged Taiwan by recklessly. offering weapons to Beijing. A policy of American friendship but no weapons to either Chinese government might coax a reduction of Soviet forces along the potentially explosive Chinese-Soviet border and placate the Taiwan government.

As for strategic arms control, a simple American ratification of SALT-2 and postponement of fur-ther European missile deployment would bring the Soviet Union back to Geneva, probably with new conces-sions in hand.

Such political negotiations will never be easy, and some will fail. Nonetheless, there is evidence that the Soviet leadership, faced with serious domestic and foreign problems, is ready for a renewed and comprehensive diplomacy that could include Eastern Europe.

The Soviet government contributed, of course, to the militarization of the present relationship. But the choice now is stark and fateful; either diplomacy and détente, or militarism and missiles.

On Hunger, Capitalism, And Tides

By Jonathan Power

LONDON — The magic — and the lifew — of capitalism is that when the ride is rising, it lifts all boats, but when it is ebbing, it beaches the boats and, as it rushes out drags along even the shells and sand It is ironic that just at the moment in the late 1970s, when a lot of developing countries had become convinced that they needed the benefits of the market economy, the main capitalist economies rudely went into a great recession. Every day comes word of the beaching of a big corporate boat. But what about the smaller vessels? The reach of the West's market economy is so long that even the smallest village in Africa is affected The evidence for this, which we have had only in bits and pieces is richly compiled in a report entitled The State of the World's Children 1984," just published by UNICEF It estimates that a 1-percent fall in the growth rate of the industrialization countries produces, on average, a 1.5. percent Iall in the growth of the de-veloping countries. Within the devel-oping countries, the ebb tide flows even faster. A 2- to 3-percent decline in average income often becomes a 10- to 15-percent fall in the incomes of the poor. The effects are particu-larly severe for women and children "If we take into account the combined effects of these multipliers." notes the report, "it is easy to see that for a poor child of a large, landless family, engaged in, say, the expon-oriented sector of a low-income economy, a drop of 2 or 3 points in the growth rate of the industrialized ma-tions may result in a deterioration of income of 50 percent or more."

From Zambia there are well-sub-stantiated reports that in the poorer northern regions, children are not growing as tall as before. In São Paulo, heartland of a dramatic poswar economic boom, the proportion of severely underweight babies is ra-ing. In Costa Rica, one of the more prosperous Latin American comtries, where wise economic and social welfare policies have gone hand a hand, the number of children being treated for severe malnutrition docbled between 1981 and 1982.

The course of the Western economy over the last two decades has proved that what Adam Smith ob-served of individual behavior in 1716. in his book "Wealth of Nations" now applies to nation-state behavior. He wrote: "Every individual . . intends only his own security - only his own gain. And he is in this led by an invisible hand to promote an end which was no part of his intention. By pursuing his own interest, he fre-quently promotes that of society more effectively than when he really intends to promote it." The "invisible hand" is now represented by the economies of the wealthy countries. Their success in the 1960s and the late 1970s brought success to the poorest countries. Alas, their present failure has dragged other nations down.

be drawn into a debate shout the mechanics of capitalism. But the information it supplies allows one ion only to deduce the above, but also to realize that, while the critical issue is to resuscitate the Western economics it is possible in the interim to design a safety net so the smallest pebbles on the beach are not swept out to sea.

The leading killer is diarrhea, which cause severe dehydration. Before, it could only be cared by intravenous feeding, no easy matter in the oush. Now UNICEF markets a little packet containing a mixime of salt and sugar that, fed to the child in a water-based solution, quickly rebydrates him. Thirty-four countries have begun producing the mixture, and 80 million packets are being produced. UNICEF aims to increase that to I billion.

The agency's second breakthrough is growth charts that can warn paents whether their child's growth is below acceptable norms.

The third is breast-feeding. The modern surge in bottle-feeding is re-

If all these were carried out —and all can be afforded even by the poor est of countries — the lives of 20,000 children would be saved each day. UNICEF estimates.

In the Same Moral Pot?

One of the cleverest aspects of an originally leftist media campaign launched in West Germany in the mid-1970s in order to dislodge Western Europe from its close ties to the United States is the unrelenting referral to "the superpowers."

This concept has purposefully thrown the United States into one moral pot with the Russians. At the same time, it allows Europeans to pretend to a smaller role in confronting the Russians.

That plays nicely into the hands of both the right and the left. The former can continue to increase business industry, while the latter can hammer away at the U.S. position of moral

of taxation is a slap in the face of every wage-earning American.

By now, it is generally accepted that successful politicians are expected to repay the debts they owe to those who have facilitated their advancement. However, the amount of Mr. Reagan's debt — which includes the lowering of pollution control standards, the reduction of truth in advertising, and Secretary James Watt's legacy - appears so huge and the repayment of it so blatant, that one wonders if his accession to power was quite worth the incurring of it.

If an inducement to reward a special interest is no less reprehensible because it does not involve a cash payment, then Mr. Reagan's across are no less blameworthy than those of ex-Prime Minister Tanaka in Japan or Economics Minister Octo Lambs dorff of West Germany.

It has been an eventhal week on the "Coro-nation Street" set at the Granada TV studios in Manchester, Aside from the indicated goings on, the series passed a silestone, its 23d anni-versary on the air in Britain. No other television series has lasted as long in this country or, probably, in the world.

Two "Coronation Street" episodes are shown every week and each is regularly watched by at least 13 million people, sometimes as many as 17 million. The Street is invariably among the top five programs in the British television ratings.

There are Street-watchers around the world as well. The series has been dubbed into Spanish and Hindi and shown with Chinese subtitles in Hong Kong Letters are still arriving at Granada TV from Ims in the United States, although the Street has not been broadcast there since the early fall.

Over the years, British reviewers have filled columns trying to explain the Street phenome-non. "It is British folklore, a rich and wondrous reflection of northern life which reaches into the heart of the nation," gushed one.

Bill Podmore, the Street's executive producer, says simply, "People love it because they can see themselves in it."

Podmore carefully avoids using the term "soap opera" to describe the Street. He prefers the expression "folk opera." He explains: "A folk opera is an in-depth reflection of real life. 1 call 'Dallas' a soap opera.".

Both "Dallas" and "Coronation Street" afford viewers an escape from reality, but, the routes of departure could hardly differ more. The Street is so far removed from the lip gloss and invary of the American series that it could ANCHESTER — Hilds and almost have stepped out of a different century.

Street has succeeded in Britain precisely oc-cause it has tapped a rich seem of nostalgia for stable, traditional communities.

A mythical working class neighborhood in the north England county of Lancashire pro-vides the setting. It is fined with Victorian row houses, the ideal place for neighborly (or nosy) residents. About 20 people live here, work here, and drick here, The corner pub, the Rovers Return is where they all meet to associate over Return, is where they all meet to agonize over the latest domestic crisis, whether it a a philan-dering boyfriend or the problems of breeding

The drama on the Street is laced with wry humor. Hilds and Stan Orden often contribute comic relief. When Stan worries aloud about the cost of their anniversary festivities, Hilda cuts in sharply:

"Well, what would you prefer, Stan? A nice little candlelight supper for two with me run-ning down to the chippie and you fetching in a dozen cans of ale?"

"Now you're talking," he wheezes, stabbing the air with his foretinger. "I think life is more about laughter than it is a must me is more about laughter than it is about crying." Podmore says. "I want to see a balance between humor and drama, between the comedy element and the human relation-ship element."

The characters exist as real people for many Street-watchers. They are strongly drawn — everybody knows someone as haughty as Annic Walker, the landlady at the Rovers, or as bland as Ken Barlow, the college boy on the block. Over time, the Street has built up such a believable world that viewers have been known to write in, asking to book rooms at the pub for Christmas parties.

Rarely have the lines between fact and fiction become as blurred as they did last winter, when the bespectacled Deinire Barlow dithered about whether she should leave her husband for her lover.

It seemed everyone in Britain, from the milkman to the vicar, had an opinion about what she should do. The Fleet Street tabloids consolted psychiatrists, marriage counselors and competers. Street polls were run. Letters of advice flowed in from viewers. One note to Anne Kirkbride, the actress who plays Deirdre Barlow ended, "I never could see what Ken saw in you anyway, Four-Eyes."

The Street won an extra two million viewers. "It was a very big story," Podmore says with a

The love triangle provided the Street's producers with the kind of publicity they want. But recently, the coverage has not been to their liking at all. "Coronation Street" has been hit by a run of real-life scandals and misfortunes and every new twist and turn has been trumpered in the tabloids.

The case of Peter Adamson, the actor who played Len Fairclough for 22 years, heads the list. In July, Adamson was acquitted on charges of indecently assaulting young girls. Then he was fired. Before his trial he broke his contract by revealing backstage secrets to the press and because of that, the producers de-creed, he had to be killed off.

Right after that decision came the annonncement that Pat Phoenix was resigning. Phoenix, known on the Street as Elsie Tanner. was an original cast member. Another defector is Geoffrey Hughes. He played the roly-poly garbage collector, Eddie Yeats, and he has just departed from the screen, taking his bride, Marion, played by Veronic Doran, with him.

Illness has had its own role to play. Doris Speed, better known as Annie Walker, is recuperating from a stomach ailment. She hasn't been seen on the Street for months. One character who will never return is the long-suffering Bert Tilsley — Peter Dudley, the actor who played him, died in October.

What was bad news on one Street was big news on another. "Street Jinx Strikes Again," crowed one Fleet Street paper. "Panic in the Street," shouted another.

Podmore sighs in exasperation. "They use 'Coronation Street' to increase their circula-

But will the Street outlive its troubles? Podmore leans back in his chair at the Granada TV studios here. "You know," he replies,
"five years ago a British astrologer, Russell Grant, predicted that 'Coronation Street' would go through a very difficult patch in-1983. He said if it survives that, which it will, it will go on forever. And he's absolutely right."

Orson Welles and Henry Jaglom.

What's New With Orson Welles?

ARIS - Orson Welles is a magician, Henry Jaglom a sorcerer's apprentice. Jaglom, a 41-year-old director, is better known in Hollywood for his charismatic charpah than for his films. He even got Welles to play in his first movie, "A Safe Place" (1970), during the filming of which Welles gave him the following indelible advice: "Whenever the crew says a scene won't cut or won't work or isn't in the script, tell them it's a dream sequence." Sometimes even a magician needs a helping hand and Welles and Jaglom have teamed up to make pictures together. The scene is a Paris hotel. From outside the door of their suite one can already hear Welles's booming laugh.

They are talking. Jaglom explains, about the title of their new company: Weljag. Welles likes it because he says it sounds like a silver mine that the Hunt brothers might own. "We are co-directors or something," he explains with a grave imprecision.

"We are announcing the formation of the Weljag company, which is announcing the production of two films which will be produced by myself, separate from my directing activities, and directed by Mr. Welles," Jaglom states. "We have just completed the financing of 'King Lear, which Mr. Welles will direct and star in, on this trip to Paris."

Weljag, Jaglom continues, is wholly owned. Liechtenstein-incorporated, offshore and worldwide. "We are very big and ambiguous," adds Welles. He looks in great form, happy to be back at work. He lives in Las Vegas these days and will make "King Lear" imminently in Hollywood. From the technical point of view, says Jaglom, "King Lear" will be as revolutionary as "Citizen Kane." As for the text, Welles is bursting with

A problem with Shakespeare, he says, is that in his lifetime his plays were performed in huge theaters and Shakespeare had to keep inventing executs and flourishes to move armies on and off. "Up to now everybody, myself included, felt we had to extend the visual elements instead of doing what the movies make possible, which is reducing it to its essential so it becomes a more abstract and intimate 'Lear,' It's about old age and it's not about somebody trying to outsing the Metropolitan and outshout the thunder.'

"Orson also has a vision of 'Lear' in relation to women," Henry

"I believe the key to Lear and his extraordinary behavior at the beginning of the play, which is the toughest thing to swallow, is the fact that he probably had three wives, anyway probably two, and his last wife died in childbirth and he has lived for at least 25 years without the company of women. He lives with his knights, he's going to pieces. The absence of women, of the civilizing element of life, is the thing that blinds him and makes his tragedy."

Lear casts off his knights and turns to his daughters, whom he hardly knows, with predictable results. The youngest, Cordelia, says Welles, is like Lear in temperament and so is furious with her father, although she Welles Says. is not usually played this way.

"I think she should be enraged by this charade. At the end of the play she is leading the armies of France against the combined forces of Cornwall and Albany — in other words, Britain. Now she can't be Goldilocks, you know. She's got to look like the kind of woman who can lead an army. And I think the older sisters should be definitely older than she is, you should almost feel they're by another wife, that they're the eternal type of 'knowing what's best for Dad.' No matter how willainous they are, everything they say should be terribly reasonable, they should never lose the tone of reason with which you shove the old gentleman into the old folks' home because 'you'll be with your own kind.'

"Lear abdicates out of a combination of self-indulgence and wisdom. which often happens, you know. He makes the terrible mistake that old people make because old people do not live by love, they're kept alive by power. That's why conductors never die. As long as they stand up in front of that orchestra and everybody looks at them, how can they die?"

Actors are lining up for Lear, Henry says. Right now there's a problem with another film, "The Other Side of the Wind," which Welles started shooting years ago and which is acted by such directors as Paul Mazursky, Peter Bogdanovich, Jaglom and John Huston.

"Huston's part shows how angelic I am because it's the best part I ever wrote and I gave it to John because I thought he'd be better. Now I think that gets me straight to heaven," Welles says piously. He is wearing a terrycloth caftan cut like a pup tent.

The problem, says Henry, is that "The Other Side of the Wind" was financed by the shah of Iran's brother-in-law and one of the ayatollah's first acts on seizing power was to claim that the film belonged to him. The partly finished negative is in a Paris bank vault and Welles, who believes strongly in the Napoleonic code, went to a French court to get the negative back. The court, says Henry, decided in Welles's favor and he will have the negative in his hands in two weeks. Now that he is about to get it back, Welles is bubbling with plans.

"I'd finally lost the last drop of interest after all these years of the film sitting in the can. The burden of ever having to finish it became terrible,"

he says.

"Why I got involved," says Henry, "is I ran into Orson in a restaurant four years ago and I said, 'How are vou?' and his line to me was, 'I've lost my girlish enthusiasm,' and I said, 'Oh, my God.' "

"And he gave it back to me." Welles says.

Both Welles and Jaglom say their favorite Welles film is his last, "F for Fake." made in 1973, which is about illusion and reality and suggests.

it doesn't much matter which is which Jaglom calls "F for Fake" a film about boxes within boxes and says "The Other Side of the Wind" in its new form will continue this theme. "It's about the very thing which it's about, making a movie. So it's a movie about making a movie within which there is a movie and within that movie the filmmaker makes a

The movie that the filmmaker makes is erotic. "It was a great liberating thing for me." Welles pronounces, "because I got to make a movie that was not an Orson Welles movie. I would never make an erotic movie, but I decided my director would, so I went ahead and made one. He made a much better one that I would make myself." Roars of

From the beginning Welles has had his problems with conventional film people. "The Magnificent Ambersons," which many people consider his finest work, was reshaped without his knowledge because of its downbeat ending. "The whole point of 'Ambersons,' the way I made it, all the glorification of the old days, was to show how it all went to pieces. And the whole of my last 31/2 reels was thrown away. They tacked on two terrible little scenes by someone else and there it is."

Welles is a bigger figure than any studio executive and so the harm he has caused himself is greater than anything they could inflict. He has joked for years that his projected film of "Don Quixote" should be called "When are you going to finish Don Quixote?" but he is genuinely hurt that people take this to mean he can't finish a project.

"Don Quixote," he says, was first shelved because he was waiting for Franco to die. "It's an essay on Spain, not Don Quixote, I've never told anyone that, It's like a book, I decided not to finish that book now, no problem at all."

"So many people don't understand that a filmmaker can put a film away like a writer or a painter and come back to it later." Henry says. "It helps create the mythology of Orson not finishing things." "I could fill a whole room with myths about me," says Welles. "That sounds pompous but I've been around for over 50 years so naturally a lot of myths go on and I could fill a room with people dressed up in the different myths, you know." "When I started trying to get financing." Henry said, "the stories that came back had nothing to do with reality. I think people feel very comfortable with mythology." The myths are of course the fault of Welles, the great illusionist. "That's perfectly true, perfectly true," he says. "In 'F for Fake' I said I

"Why I got involved," says Henry, "is I ran into Orson in a restaurant four years ago and I said 'How are you?" and his line to me was, 'I've lost my girlish enthusiasm' and I said 'Oh, my God.'"

"And he gave it back to me," was a charlatan and didn't mean it." The film was about the art forger Elmyr de Hory. "I said I was a charlatan because I didn't want to sound superior to Elmyr, so I emphasized that I was a magician and cauted it a charlatan, which isn't the same thing. And so I was faking even then. Everything was a lie." The terrycloth caftan shakes with his laughter. "There wasn't anything that wasn't."

Most important to Welles personally was a remark he overheard a French director make while he was cutting "F for Fake" in the Antegor studio in Paris. "He was heard by me to say, 'Welles est decharge' ['Welles is burned out']. And that was while I was making 'F for Fake.'
Well, afterward when I was sitting in a restaurant I began to think he was right.'

"No, no," says Henry. "Henry plugged me in, he made me believe I could still keep going and that there was a reason to do it. I had begun to think I should stop, you know, and write my memoirs of 20 volumes so I could still be paid for something and stop this misery." Something about all this creative energy had been stopped," says

Now it's all aboil again. "The Other Side of the Wind" will be released by the French court in two weeks, "King Lear" will start shooting in the fall and "The Big Brass Ring," a Welles screenplay, will start as soon as Weljag signs the right male star.

"I think in a sense that 'The Big Brass Ring' is a bookend to 'Kane' in the sense that 'Kane' was about America at the beginning of the century and this is about America at the end of the century," Henry says, "We have the financing, we are in the middle of complex negotiations with a

So Weljag is off to a great start. "We're very intimate friends and I believe we understand not only each other but our work," Welles says brightly. "Three years of uninterrupted conversation has led to this."

This interview took place last June. During a recent telephone conversa-tion from New York, Henry Jaglom reported the state of play at the present time. The French court has still not ordered the negative of "The Other Side of the Wind" to be given to Welles, who finally left Paris after waiting two of the Wind to be given to Welles, who finally left Faris after waiting two months during which he was elected to the Academie des Beaux Arts and referred to as a Grand Scigneur de l'Image. "King Lear" is delayed because Welles wants to complete "The Other Side of the Wind" first. "A realistic assumption is that within two years both will be finished, though in what order they will be released is also not clear." Jack Nicholson has agreed to star in "The Big Brass Ring" but his fees require restructuring the budget. "The economics are being worked out." Welles, Jaglom reports, is very fit and eager to get back to swimming 20 laps a day. "Orson's spirits are excellent, couldn't be bener." And, says Jaglom, Welles was awfully pleased to be proclaimed a Lord of the Image.

Soloist in a Mideast Peace Dance

by Jane M. Friedman

TEL AVIV - On July 12, 1979, meanbers of an Israeli audience in Caesarea watched a performance of the Berlin Opera's ballet "Canderella." starring Valery and Galina Panov and co-starring a dancer unknown in Israel till then. In great trepidation, an Egyptian dancer, Reda Sheta, was making his debut in Israel, only three and a half months after the per treaty between Israel and Egypt had been signed Aside from Cairo's diplomats, he was one of the first Egyptians to come to Israel.
Since then, the 34-year-old Sheta has become the lead male dancer in Israel's Bat Dor Dance Company. Although he is based in Zurich, he performs with the troupe in Israel and tours with it abroad, most recently in New

"His participation has had a relevance in terms of relations with Egypt," says Harry Swersky, business manager of Bat Dor. "It's been good for the both of us."

"I feel good with the people here," says Sheta. "I feel at home Itel Aviv is not so.

different from Alexandria." In 1979, when the Panova asked Sheta to dance in Israel, he was so scared that he considered declining. "I told them I had to have guarantees for myself, extra security," he says at his dance studio in Tel Aviv. Recalling his terror, he laughs.

Members of the Bat Dor company saw Sheta dance with the Panovs in Caesarea and decided to invite him to their studies, Bat Dor - whose name means "contemporary" — was looking for a new male lead.

for a new male lead.
"It was amazing," says Jeaneste Ordman, the company's artistic director and prima ballersna. "Every lift we tried, worked. One of the reasons is we have the same length arms.". -

Sheta quickly agreed to dance with Bat Dor, partly to break out of the routine of "Giselle" and "Swan Lake" that he seemed to have been performing all over Europe ever since he had left Egypt as a teen-ager.

Fig was with the Cairo Ballet from 1966 to 1969, then moved to Enrope. He danced with the Palermo and Bologna companies before joining the Zurich Opera Ballet in 1975. He is now a guest performer with both the Zunich Opers Ballet and the Berlin Opers. Bat Dor was his introduction to American-style modern dance.

At first, Sheta looked stiff, says Baroness

Batsheva de Rothschild, who, with Ordman, founded the company in 1968. But eventually Reda Sheta. he mastered the movements and style.

"For the first time," says Dora Sowdon, dance critic of the Jerusalem Post, "Bat Dor has a real male star."

Sheta and the Israeli members of the company say he is part of the family. He has made friends, enjoys Israeli food and has learned some Hebrew. The company seems to regard him as just another dancer, with a penchant for it. But politics usually does not enter the relationship between him and the other members.

Thate to mix politics with art. Sheta says.

Sometimes, though, the mixture seems unavoidable. The Bat Dor company became embroiled in controversy last spring during its tour of Africa — a publicity brochure offended acting onstage and off.

Sheta's family in Cairo has accepted his move here. So have his Egyptian friends, who at first were shocked. And for the Israelis in Bat Dor, the assimilation of Reda Sheta is regarded as proof that art can be a vehicle to cross-cultural understanding "That's the marvelous thing about dance," says the Bat Dor's choreographer, Domy Reiter-Soffer. "It's its own religion. We're all sweating, so there's no time to speak. Maybe if the whole world stopped speaking, we'd have a bit of peace, like we do in dance."

BARRON'S mused ... "The market seems to be saying its seem the interest in it doesn't work". We challenged their pessimism, having commented the previous week, that a herculean bull market was spawning. To say that the Press will prove equally myopic in evaluating the "litusory oil glut", is understatement. Virtually every economic projection made by the Press boomerangs. The Press also has propensity to ignore what ultimately evolves as historic events. When OPEC was born in Baghdad in 1960, the press of the West was blind, The N.Y. TIMES published a brief news item on their back with Red China; editorial writers surmised that if 900,000,000 Chineses simultaneously jumped off step ladders, a tidal wave would ensue, drowning North America. Now, Red China is considered "chic", an adulation for Maxim's in Peking has replaced the idolatry once reserved for Chairman Mao. All of which is a verbose way of spanking the Press for their naiveté in promoting the thesis that the "oil glut" is permanent. For months F.P.S. has advised the production of the producti stashing away the oils, predicting that another OPEC crisis is coalescing, a crisis to be orchestrated by the "Seven Sisters", the international oil The Press may disagree, which delights contrarians. While the Press was hyping APPLE COMPUTER at $56, we categorized the stock as a "Lemon", suggesting a short sale. Current price? $20. The oils will ignite, flaring beyond post 1981 highs. Among seniors, AMERADA HESS $28 may be ingested above $55 by a powerful and oily predator. Christmas Shopping: In Vienna And in Paris

THNNA - The painter Arik Braner, 54, whose surrealistic vision lies somewhere between the Bruegels' and Hieronymas Bosch's and whose sprawling splashes of color have made him the sprawing spiesees or color have made into the most suprissing and among of Vienna's "fantastic realists," had a shockingly small exhabition last month—in a window and two shownesses of Köchen's, the crown lewelers from

In his studio, Brance has created 33 pieces of costume jewery ranging in price from 3,150 schillings (about $165) for a silver serpent pendant to golden necklaces of Mozart's Papa-pendant to golden necklaces of Mozari's Papagano (Brauer designed a memorable Paris Opera production of "The Magic Plate" in the 70s) for 70,791 schillings and a pear-shaped gardener girl for 83,391 schillings.

Most of the pieces were sold during the exhibition, but Brauer's clay reliefs remain intact for a gedstanish or silversmith to produce new ones when ordered. Only the smallest (in size and price) will be ready for Christmas, but these include such recurrent Brauer symbols as the Lion of Judea (25,662 schillings) and Star of David (25,071 schillings) pecklaces; a Prophet bracelet (14,374 schillings); scanab (3,423 schillings) and fish (4,053 to 5,124 schillings) pendants; and rings with similar themes from 4,053 to 6,646 schillings.

All these prices are for a cr. For gilded silver, add 16.67 percent. For gold, multiply the silver price by 3,33. Theoraid 10 percent for shipping and insurance and send the total to A.F. Köckert, Neuri Mariet 15, A-1010 Vienna, If you order from outside Austria, you

Vienna is winding down a yearleng celebration of its withstanding a Tankish siege 300 years ago, thereby saving the West for Christianity, Christmas and Christmas giving The events of 1683 also inspired the Viennese coffeebouse, which was built on the beans the Turks left behind. If you want an official souvenir of the Coffeebouse Year, the Viennese Coffeehouse Association has commis sioned two glasses — coffee used to be sipped by the glass — imprinted with its coffeepot emblem and the words Wiener Kaffee Speziali-

The taller glass is called Kolschitzky in honor of the Vicanese spy who penetrated the Tink-ish lines and knew what to do with the mysterious brown beans. The shorter and stouter glass, which has a handle, is called Mustafa in honor of the otherwise discredited Turkish sultan whose forces were repelled at the gates of Vienna. It is an Europäinner glass.— Europäinner means both a glass of black coffee, with whipped cream and powdered sugar, and a one-horse carriage. The glass has long been favored by the cavalry of cabbies because they can hold the reins with one hand and the handle of a Einspänner with the other.

Rist's glasses also hold water, whiskey and be sent in cartons of an (any assortment) wine only foldast of which is drunk widely anywhere in Europe if you add 150 schillings a in Austria. It used to be said, with some truth, carton when ordering from Jost von Hopler, that any Austrian white wine was better than all Austrian reds and that, since they're bottled young, Austrian wines don't travel.

The veritas in the vineyards has changed, however, in the decade since Jost von Höpler took over as the winemaker at Klosterkeller, Siegendorf, hard by the Hungarian border. After producing two superb reds that won national gold medals in 1979, he sent his wines maveling on Austrian Airlines flights and soon he was drawing inquiries from passengers, wholesalers and international distributors. Another Austrian import-export miracle is refugees. Ever since the four-power occupation ended in 1955. Austria has been the only country in the world offering unrestricted political asylum to those who cross its frontiers.

Starting with Hungarians in 1956 and continuing with Czechs and Slovaks in 1968, Poles in 1981 and today's trickle of Cambodians, Nicaraguans, Ugandans, Afghans and Russian Jews, there have been absolutely no time limits, small print or even besitation in Austria's concern for political and religious refugees.

Their halfway house for resettlement in Austria or elsewhere is the refugee camp at Traiskirchen, which is always overburdened and underfinanced and would welcome Christmas contributions, payable to Fluechtlingslager Traiskirchen and sent to the social welfare director, Fran Stipsicz, at Otto Gloeckel-Strasse 24, A-2514 Transkirchen, Austria.

ARIS - Christmas shopping in Paris is as special as the city itself. There is a serendipitous discovery around almost every corner, whether it is something to buy or something for the eye: an eccentric new boutique near the Piace des Vosges, a dedicated craftsman repairing a cello in the Marais, the strains of Vivaldi through the crisp evening air in St. Germain des Pres. the sleek elegance of a sunny Saturday morning on the Rue du Faubourg Saint-Honoré.

The insouciant charm of the Marais spawns many an original gift. Handcrafted reproductions of antique tiles from Smart. at 22 Rue des Francs-Bourgeois, Paris 3 (tel: 277.41.24). with colorful motifs of the zodiac or Marseilles tarot card figures, about 90 francs (about $11). would make an unusual present once framed. Just down the street, the Carrelages du Marais at 46 Rue Vicille-du-Temple, Paris 4 (tel: 278.17.43), will make a hand-painted pottery Christmas plate to your design for 210 francs. The store also has framed bird tiles at 120 francs and plates, candlesticks and ink pots at

For those who love Paris so much they want to take some of it home: Parisian lanterns and street lamps in styles from Louis XIII through Art Deco from Le Jardin Saint Paul at 24 Quai des Celestins, Paris 4 (tel: 278.08.89), which is expert at shipping these rather unwieldy souvenirs. Lanterns start at 340 francs, street lamps cost 480 to 800 francs.

Right out of Batwoman's wardrobe - the most unconventional belt in town inspired by a spider's web, 990 francs from the new Boutique Sentimental, at 14 Rue du Roi de Sicile, Paris 4 (tel: 278.84.04), whose beautifully made clothes are as expensive as they are extraordi-

The legendary luxury of the Faubourg Saint-Honore lends a certain cachet to a gift. Lanvin, at 22 Rue du Faubourg Saint-Honore, Paris 8 (tel: 265.14.40) has an elegant solution to keeping your hands warm: a Russian mult evening bag made of braided satin in red, black or gold, trimmed with black velvet chenille and worn with a long black satin cord, 680 francs.

Cassegrain, at 422 Rue Saint-Honoré, Paris 8 (tel: 260.20.08), where the gratin order their writing paper and visiting cards, has an extensive line of both classic and amusing writing material and desk accessories. Cards in the form of hearts, doves, cats or palettes come in eight colors (35 to 45 francs for 12), perfect for the inevitable thank-you notes, or you can buy a first lock-up diary sprinkled with red hearts,

Also in the neighborhood is the toy store Au Nain Bleu at 406-410 Rue Saint-Honoré, Paris 8 (tel: 260.39.01). In tin, Napoleon and four of his soldiers cost 280 francs: a full complement of empire soldiers, in plastic, is 820 francs. Red or green Christmas stockings are 75 francs and Santa Claus boots come in two sizes: 36 francs

For the harried homemaker, after all that bending over a hot stove, what could be kinder than a gift massage by Jacqueline of Ingrid Millet at 54 Rue du Faubourg Saint-Honoré, Paris 8 (tel: 266.66.20), who looks after the celebrated bodies of Sylvie Vartan, Isabelle Adjani and Regine Crespin? A 50-minute rub-down costs 165 francs; for 265 francs you get an hour's soak in sea mud.

Dior, at 30 Avenue Montaigne, Paris 8 (tel: 723.54,44), has the premiest store decorations in Paris. Good values this year: Glass boule cuff links in many colors, 260 francs; smashing red and white striped suspenders, 290 francs; a silver-plated card case, 150 francs plus 45 francs for engraving: an address book or agenda in regimental striped-tie silk, 250 francs each: large silk men's handkerchiefs, which can be used as small scarves, in paisley or polkadots, 150 francs.

Where but to Montparnasse, traditional haunt of artists, to look for a gift for your favorite Sunday painter? Artès, at 26 Rue Vavin. Paris 6 (tel: 326.94.99), has a wooden painter's case of palette, brushes and gouaches for 184 francs. At the same address, Rouge et Noir (tel: 326.05.77) has two packs of playing cards with themes of French wines and cheeses, 35 francs each, and a charming Russian chess set with brightly painted red and yellow dolls as pieces, 345 francs.

Posters from French museum and gallery art shows are always popular. The Galerie du Chapitre, 23 Rue Guénégaud, Paris 6 (tel. 354.27.70), has a good selection from 30 to 900 francs, framed from 350 francs.

Left Bank bohemian chic is exemplified by the ravishing ruffled satin garters, in pink or saucy black with pink ribbons, 100 francs at Chantal Thomass, 11 Rue Madame, Paris 6 (tel: 544.57.13). It is also the address for the most-sought-after lace stockings in town, 140 francs, or 190 francs for lace tights.

There's great glitter at Ancolie, 8 Rue de Sèvres, Paris 6 (tel: 548.58.31). The shop's black rubber "dog collar" with rhinestone buckle must be this year's most amusing neck-lace, a snap at 210 francs with matching bracelet and belt, 150 francs and 250 francs.

Other suggestions: A lightweight fabric shoulder bag to go everywhere in muted Re-naissance colors with black satin cord, perfect Impressions, 29 Rue de Condé, Paris 6 (tel: 326.97.86). Picturesque needlepoint Christmas stockings to make for next year, 480 francs for the kit from Kell's Corner, 94 Rue de Grenelle, Paris 7 (tel. 544.64,26).

An original way to get your message across comes from Chacun Pour Toi. 58 Rue de Bourgogne, Paris 7 (tel: 551.38.48), mecca for the personalized present. Virtually everything in the shop - ashtrays, cushions, glasses, silver hearts — can be appliqued, painted or en-graved with the name, initials, phrase or photograph you desire at a cost from 50 to 800

After all those parties, what about a refreshing "Baptème de L'Air" in a hot air balloon? An hourlong flight is 712 francs from Les Montgolfières de France, 55 Quai de Bourbon, Paris 4 (tel: 271,39,25).

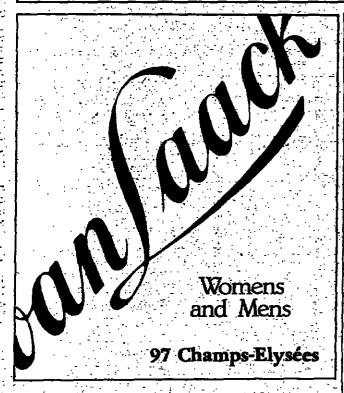

Off the beaten track but worth the detour is the enchanting Pain d'Epice at 29 Passage. Jouffroy. Paris 9 (tel: 770.82.65). You'll find everything for the dollhouse (including the ready-to-paint house itself, 580 francs), down to the minibottle of champagne, 22 francs, hand puppets (a red-robed king with crown perched jauntily on his bald wooden pate is 69 francs), marionettes, books, games and imaginative gift baskets with different themes: the bath, writing paper and pen, breakfast howls with jams, rainbow lollipops and candy canes. You can buy them ready-made (about 80 to 150 francs) or put one together yourself.

Pipemakers since 1867, the Pipe du Nord at Boulevard de Magenta, Paris 10 (tel: 208.23.47) is a tiny shop packed with pipes—its handcrafted models in briar, 150 to 2,000 francs; pottery pipes, old and new, 26 to 100 francs; and pipes whose sculptured "sea foam" white bowls reveal an Arab prince, Sherlock Holmes or Bacchus, among others, 500 to 1,500 francs.

Festive touches: For her, white and green holly faience candlesticks, 95 francs from Le Cèdre Rouge, 22 Avenue Victoria, Paris I (tel: 233.71.05). And for a practical joker, an electric plug that allows one to clap off and on the light it's attached to, 200 francs from Mec Plus Ultra. 5 Rue Bréa, Paris 6 (tel: 354.87.29).

Everyone likes to be home for the holidays Help more than 750 children to spend this Christmas and many others with their brothers and sisters in one of the houses supported by the Villages de Joie, 6 Cité Monthiers, Paris 9 (tel: 526.71.79), which provides surrogate mothers and homes to keep large families of orphans and abandoned children together, or give to the Petits Frères des Pauvres, 33 Avenue Parmentier, Paris 11 (tel: 355.39.19), who make it possible for the aged and infirm to to post or pack, 195 francs exclusive to Les remain independent in their own homes.

OSTON - The 20th anniversary of President John F. Kennedy's assassination makes the Kennedy Library an excellent starting point for a tour of Boston. The glearning white marble and glass library, designed by I.M. Pei, is one of Boston's most rewarding though often-over-looked, attractions. The library has been staging a special display on public reaction to the assassination in addition to its superb halfhour film on Kennedy's life and its regular exhibits about the president and his family. Few visitors go away unmoved.

Set on Columbia Point with a magnificent view of Boston Harbor, the Kennedy Library is a good reminder that Boston is a city of presidents. Along with John Kennedy, John Adams and John Quincy Adams, who were natives, both Theodore and Franklin Roosevelt went to Harvard University in Cambridge across the Charles River, and Calvin Coolidge rose to fame by stopping the Boston police strike.
The Kennedy Library (tel: 617-929-4523) is best reached by car and is a 15-minute drive from downtown. Take the Southeast Expressway to Exit 17 and then follow the signs. The library is open daily from 9 A.M. to 5 P.M.; admission is $1.50, children under 16 free. President Kennedy's birthplace in suburban Brookline, at 83 Beals Street, is also a National Historic Site and is open to the public from 10:30 A.M. to 4:30 P.M. daily.

E accept for getting to the Kennedy Library, driving is not recommended for the unimtiated in Boston. The narrow, crooked streets downtown are said to have been laid out by wandering cows in the 17th century, and that is easy to believe. Even when they are not torn up for construction of the hotels and office buildings that have transformed the city center over the last 15 years, the streets have few signs and little parking.

Fortunately, Boston is one of the best cities in America for walking. It is extremely com-pact, and most of the sights can easily be reached on foot.

Boston's subway system, the oldest in America. is extensive, with its lines differentiated by colors: The Red Line runs from downtown to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and then Harvard University in Cambridge, the Blue Line goes to Logan Airport, and the Green Line goes out past the Museum of Fine Arts and Boston University and Boston Col-

As an alternative, Trolley Tours (tel: 269-7010) has a one-hour tour that covers the major sights downtown. It leaves from the harbor side of Quincy Market, from noon to 6 P.M. The fare is $4. Gray Line, at the Sheraton-Boston Hotel in the Prudential Center (tel: 426-8805), has year-round tours that include Lexington and Concord - two major names of the American Revolution — and Plymouth as

With your internal compass adjusted, you might then try the Freedom Trail, a threemile (about five-kilometer) stretch of American history covering 16 historic sites, that is easy to follow along the painted sidewalk lanes. Maps are available from the Boston National Historical Park Visitor Center, 15 State Street (tel: 223-0058). Officially, the trail begins beside the Boston Common at the golden-domed State House designed by Charles Bulfinch in 1798. But you can start anywhere and proceed at your own pace. Allow two to three hours for the whole trail.

From the State House the trail leads to the Park Street Church, where William Lloyd Garrison gave his first anti-slavery address, past King's Chapel, the first Anglican church in the New World, to the Old South Meeting House, where the Boston Tea Party was plotted. Another block brings you to the Old State House, the site of the Boston Massacre. Walk one more block toward the waterfront and you will be in the midst of the Faneuil Hall Marketplace, also known as Quincy Market, the anchor and showpiece of Boston's redevel-opment. The red brick building in front is Faneuil Hall itself, donated to the city by the wealthy merchant Peter Faneuil in 1742. Here Samuel Adams led the town meetings protesting British taxation. The second-floor chamber is still used for town meetings and debates between mayoral candidates. The three long buildings to the rear, Boston's wholesale market in the 19th century, were converted in the late 1970s into a carnival of boutiques, eating places, gift shops and mime and magic shows.

The Freedom Trail then continues under the elevated Central Artery, crossing into the North End, This is one of the oldest parts of town, having been the birthplace of Benjam Franklin, the home to waves of Irish immigrants in the 19th century. It now houses a mixture of Italian immigrants and affluent young professionals who are enchanted by its narrow streets and ethnic grocery stores.

A few blocks down Hanover Street, the main thoroughfare, a right on Richmond Street takes you to the Paul Revere House. Built in 1680, it is the oldest building in Boston. A few blocks farther on Hanover is Old North Church, where the lanterns were hung to start Paul Revere on his ride.

Prudential BOYLSTON Copley

The Freedom Trail then continues across the Charlestown Bridge to the Navy Yard and the USS Constitution, "Old Ironsides," the 44-gun frigate launched in 1797 and undefeated in 24 battles — one of the most popular attractions in Boston. Next to the ship is the Bunker Hill Pavilion, with a 25-minute multimedia show that recreates the Battle of Bunker Hill. The Bunker Hill battlefield and monument are up the hill beyond the Navy Yard.

A pleasant complement to the Freedom Trail is to start at the State House and walk in the other direction, surveying Beacon Hill. Henry James, who lived at No. 131 Mount Vernon Street, behind the State House, once called it "the only respectable street in Ameri-

he Museum of Fine Arts (465 Huntington Avenue, tel: 267-9300), with its new west wing designed by Pei, is worth a trip to Boston itself. In the 160 galleries are the finest Old Kingdom sculpture outside Cairo, an authentic Catalonian chapel, early American furnished rooms, an excellent collection of Chinese and Japanese art. Hours: 10 A.M. to 5 P.M., closed Mondays, Admission: $3; under 17, free.

A small gem, treasured by Bostomans, is the Isabella Stewart Gardner Museum, a Venetian palazzo transported to America by Mrs. Gardner and filled with art assembled for her by Bernard Berenson, At 280 The Fenway, near the Museum of Fine Arts, it is open Tuesday through Sunday from 1 P.M. to 5:30 P.M. Donations are suggested.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra is now in its second century, with concerts Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday at 8 P.M. and Fridays at 2 P.M. Seiji Ozawa, the music director, will be away in December, but guest conductors will fill in At Symphony Hall, 301 Massachinsetts Avenue (tel: 266.1492)

Any visit might profitably include the obser-vatory atop the blue glass John Hancock Tower in Copiey Square. In addition to its panoramic view of Boston, the observatory features a useful five-minute film and an urbane and delightful recorded talk by Walter Muir Whitehill, the late Boston historian, taking you through Boston's history. The observatory is open daily from 9 A.M. to 11 P.M., Sundays from noon to 11 P.M. Admission: $2.25; $1.50 for ages 5-15, free under 5.

With 13 new hotels either recently opened or under construction, Boston has nearly doubled its hotel space in the last year. It is now possible to find a room without booking months in advance, although it is still recommended that visitors reserve early for the better

The discreet dowager of Boston's hostelines is the Ritz-Carlton (15 Arlington Street, tel: 536-5700) facing the Public Garden. The Ritz is not a physically spectacular hotel, but it is run with impeccable taste and concern for privacy. A double room costs from $125 to Much larger and showier is the new Westin Hotel (10 Huntington Avenue in Copley Square, tel: 262-9600). With contemporary glass, greenery and waterfalls, it is luxurious but lacks a traditional sense of Boston. Double rooms range from $140 to $190.

Perhaps the most popular new hotel is the Marriott Long Wharf (296 State Street, tel: 227-0800). Built on the site of a former wharf jutting out into the harbor, it resembles a docked ocean liner. Doubles here run from $125 to $165.

For those on a more modest budget, the Boston Park Plaza (50 Park Place, tel: 426-2000) offers comfort and a good location at slightly lower prices. A double room here starts

F or dining, Maison Robert (45 School Street, tel: 227-3370) offers excellent French cuisine plus striking ambience. It is set inside the renovated Old City Hall, an 1865 structure where Mayor James Michael Curley had his last hurran. The restaurant also overlooks the King's Chapel Burying Ground, the first cemetery in town, with the graves of Governor John Winthrop and the Rev. John Cotten. The menu is classic and understated. Try the fresh lotte with lobster sance or the rack of lamb with the apple tart for dessert. Dinner for two with wine costs about $100.

Arguably Boston's best restaurant is L'Esoalier (30 Gloucester Street, tel: 262-3023). Set in a Back Bay townhouse, it offers a French ment that leans to nouvelle but is always imaginative, elegant and fresh. Chef Moncel Meddeb is celebrated for his game birds, like the roasted mallard duck in huckleberry sauce, and for his salmon with white peppercorns caramelized with raspberry vinegar. Allow $100 for dinner for two. Reservations are necessary.

For seafood, which you ought to sample while in the home of cod, Legal Sea Foods may have the best (at the Park Plaza Hotel, tel: 426-4444, and in the Chestmut Hill Mail in nearby Brookline, tel: 783-8084). The fish chowder is a meal in itself, and the sole, scrod and swordfish are always firsh. The times are a drawback: maddeningly long, with no reservations accepted. A meal for two will run from $15 to

More traditionally minded visitors may want to sample Boston's landmark ear Locke-Ober Cafe (3 Winter Place, tel: 542 1340) was the city's premier restaurant for almost a century before Julia Child, from Cambridge, raised Americans' gastronomic con-sciousness. The downstairs Men's Grill, now open to women, maintains its Victorian plush atmosphere and old-fashioned rich Continer tal menu. It is still a favorite with local busnessmen and politicians. Specialties include the Cape Cod broiled scallops and lobsta Savannah, lobster sautéed in butter with mush rooms, green peppers, pimientos, paprika and cream sauce. With wine, dirmer for two may be $50 to $70.

Durgin Park (30 North Market Street, tel 227-2038) is another Boston mistination. Its long communal tables, surly-waitresses and huge slabs of roast beef all remain despite the passage of years. Two may ear lunch for $15.
Nearby, the Union Oyster House (41 Union.
Street, tel: 227-2750) is the oldest restaurant in the country. As your down oysters, you can recall previous patrons, like Damiel Websits,
With drinks, a meal for two is $30 to $35.

The best Italian food may be outside the talian North End, at Allegro (458 Moors Street in Waltham, tel. 891-5486) or Circs and Sal's (500 Boylston Street, near Copies Squaretel: 437-0500). U.S., West German Firms Announce New Products to Ease Blood-Testing

PW YORK — Blood tests can be unpleasant, inconvenient and expensive And, because samples are generally shipped to a laboratory for processing, test results are often delayed.

But in the last two months, two companies have announced product that they say will enable physicians to perform a wide variety of blood tests in five minutes or less using only a drop of blood, instead of a test

Eastman Kodak Co. introduced the Ektachem DT 60 analyzer - the letters stand for "desir lop" — and Bochringer-Mannheim Diagnostics Corp. of Indianapolis, Indiana, a unit of a privately held West German concern, introduced the Refloron. would be available commercially. Both machines, the size by the end of 1984:

Unfil now, the only methods for rapid blood testing involved districts, or imprepared strips of paper similar to those used for detecting sugar in urine, or the installation of a small laboratory. of a typewriter, are based on marriages of microelectronics and dry chemistry. But both have fimits: The digstick because it can test only for ginouse and not with great precision; the lab because of the investment in space equipment and stati.

Henry M. Wespert, president of Boston Biomedical Consultants, a planning service for the industry, says the DT 60 and Refloron "will take the skill, or fact of it, that causes good or bad test results out of the user's

Mr. Weinert estimates that sales of rapid blood diagnostics — currently, directions in the United States will be about $60 million this year. But with the sales of such devices as the DI 60 and Reflotron, he predicts. tetal sales will grow to $700 million by 1990.

Both machines are about the size of a typewriter, and both are based on marriages of microelectronics and dry chemistry. In the Bockringer-Mannheim system, the sample is processed as it passes through layers of impregnated paper, while the Kodak system uses thin and precisely controlled coatings of chemicals on film. The results are then read optically under microprocessor control.

Kodak Device to Cost $6,000

The Kodak device will sell for about $6,000 and will be capable of performing as many as 70 tests an hour. The Reflotron will possibly cost less — George Evanega, vice president of Bochringer-Mannheim, estimated it would sell for $2,000 to $3,000 — but it will have a more modest capacity of 20 tests an hour.

Kodak has a considerable manufacturing advantage at the moment, according to Mr. Weinert. It features a proprietary film-coating technology that has been extensively applied for years in many of the company's non-health-related products. And the DT 60 is a variation on high-volume analyzers that Kodak is already selling to hospitals and laborato-

The Reflotron is promising, he says, but it is the first of its kind, with manufacturing and marketing problems yet to be fully addressed.

Sidney Kahn, director of the general chemistry laboratory at Philadelphia's Hospital of the University of Pennsylvania, is also impressed with Kodak's large-scale analyzers. "It's the best machine on the market," he said. But he is concerned about the potential for abuse with office models.

Warning on Wanton Use

Dr. Kalm suggests that some types of tests—such as those that measure levels of glucose, potassium enumerated in the blood—could be carried out with benefit by people who are not necessarily well versed in laboratory procedures or their interpretation. But other tests, such as those for cholesterol and calcium, he says, require controlled conditions and sophisticated analyses of results; their wanton use could lead to misleading conditions and improvements the restriction. ons and maddropulate treat

What is normal for a particular type of person in a specific environment can differ sharply from averages for the total population, Dr. Kahn says. But general statistics are all that most users would likely know.

Mr. Weinert observes that the primary purpose of such devices, however, is not diagnosis but the monitoring of uch chronic conditions as diabetes. And balanced against the need for analysis by experts, in some instances, is the trend toward patient-oriented testing, as Kodak puts it,

Slump in Oil Demand Is Seen as Long-Term

By Joseph Fitchett

LONDON - Fundamental changes in the patterns of energy consumption in the industrialized countries has resulted in a longterm flattening in world oil demand, officials and private analysts attending a conference in London agreed Thursday.

Any attempt by the Organization of Oil Exporting Countries OPEC to raise prices would only accelerate this trend for oil use to decline and would therefore be counterproductive, they said.

There was agreement among speakers that only a drastic cut in oil prices or an extraordinarily strong world recovery could significantly revive demand for oil. Both contingencies were deemed unlikely by analysis addressing the Fourth Annual Oil and Money Conference, sponsored by the International Herald Tribune and Oil Daily, a U.S.

Citing more efficient energy use and less reliance on oil in the U.S. economy, U.S. Secretary of Energy Douald P. Hodel predicted that an average economic growth rate of 2.5 percent to the end of the century could be achieved with only 1.8 percent annual increase in the use of all kinds of energy, of which oil would represent a shrinking percent-

As industry modernizes in the United States, he said, the Reagan administration believes "we have unbooked for the long term what we administration believes "we have unbooked for the long term what we used to call the lockstep relationship between energy consumption growth and growth of the economy," Mr. Hodel said.

A decline in oil prices in inflation-adjusted terms, he suggested, will result from this flat demand outlook. He expressed "doubt that there is sufficient cohesiveness in the producing nations to maintain the kind of supply restraints which would be necessary to support oil prices at their present levels."

Similarly, John H. Lichtbian, a U.S. consultant, forecast that "over the next two or three years, world oil prices will continue to decline" in inflation-adjusted terms.

Discussing the possible impact of a major supply cutoff because of

Discussing the possible impact of a major supply cutoff because of upheaval in the Gulf, Mr. Hodel and other speakers said world oil supplies could cope with anything but a long, almost total loss of oil

"There is no realistic possibility of a calamity — except as a short-term price spike — capable of driving prices up to the outer estimates of $80 a barrel," Herman T. Franssen, chief economist for International Energy Agency, said. The OPEC benchmark price is $29 a

A Shell Oil planner, Arie P. de Geus, said OPEC could recover firm demand for its oil only if Western countries attained an economic growth greater than 3 percent for the rest of the decade. The Arab planners in the Gulf, according to Abdulla A. Saudi, chief executive of Arab Banking Corp. in Bahrain, realize that the surge in oil prices in the 1970s and growth in oil exporters' revenues has ended for the foresceable future. Despite income cuts, Arab governments will slow their recent drawdowns of financial reserves by seeking leans for productive industrial projects. But private Arab banks, Mr. Saudi said, will suffer a shakeout and many takeovers and many mergers.

Big growth in oil demand, several speakers said, is only likely to occur in the developing countries as oil-intensive industries migrate these from the industrial countries. But the international debt hunder. there from the industrial countries. But the international debt burden prevents these countries from being able to afford more oil.

OPEC Discord Lingers Despite Reported Pact

GENEVA - The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries was expected to announce formal agreement Friday to maintain its current price and production struc-

At the end of the second day of OPEC's annual winter meeting, several ministers said Thursday that the agreement would reaffirm the prices and output quotas set last March.

Iran said it was putting aside its demand that OPEC rescind a $5 cut it made last March in its benchmark price. The Iranians said they would agree to keep the benchmark at $29 pending a study by an OPEC committee of why the price out had failed to bring a significant increase in demand. They claimed that the reduction had not been passed along to consumers.

Sheikh Ahmed Zaki Yamani, the Saudi Arabian oil minister, who favors a freeze on oil prices at least through the end of 1985, said that OPEC has "a serious commitment to adhere" to the price and production rules set last March.

Signs of discord remained, however. Sheikh Mana Said al-Otciba, the Untied Arrab Emirates' minister and OPEC's president, left the evening meeting early, saying that discussions were "not going very well." He is understood to have asking that UAE be given priority when demand for OPEC oil allows an increase in production quotas.

The ministers said they would discuss Friday morning the election of a new secretary general to preside over OPEC's secretariat in Vienna. The group has made do with an acting secretary general since June amid squabbles over which of several candidates to Saudis' third quarter output. Some OPEC members bitterly resented the rise in Saudi production, blaming it for the downward pressure on oil prices over the past wo months. These members have been pressing for a clearer Saudi commitment to limit production.

The discord underlines the difficulty in uniting OPEC. As it surives to prop up oil prices. Another indi-cation came Tuesday night, when Sheikh Oteiba invited all 12 of his fellow ministers to a dinner party. Only four showed up.

Pound Drops To Record Low

United Press International NEW YORK - The British pound dropped to a record low against the U.S. dollar and the dollar also rose against other currencies in busy, hectic trading Thursday.

The pound pulled back from an all-time London trading low of $1.4365 to close at $1.4415 in New York, still down from Wednesday's close of $1.4420.

The dollar rose to 2.7380 Deutsche marks from 2.7335 DM Wednesday and to 8.3080 French francs from 8.2925 francs Wednesday.

Gold prices fell by more than $14 an ounce in New York, reversing earlier gains in Hong Kong and Europe.

OPENHAGEN - Sponsored by a coalition of doctors, politicians, child psychologists and psychiatrists, a campaign is under way in Denmark to forbid parents to spank their children. The proposed law is modeled on Sweden's ban on Preben Wilhjelm and four other members of the Left Socialist Party introduced the legislation this fall in the Folketing, or parliament. They want the government to finance an information campaign against child abuse — including pamphlets telling parents how children behave at certain ages — to enact legislation forbidding parents to hit their children, to establish crisis centers where children can go for refuge and help during periods of family strife and to proclaim officially a child's right of temporary separation from his parents.

A Danish law dating from 1683 says a master or mistress has the right to hit servants and children if no permanent damage is inflicted. Supporters of the new legislation say that this old law has been interpreted by parents as a legal right to use corporal punishment and that it hinders efforts to protect children against violence.

Opponents say the legislation violates personal and family rights. They point to recent outcries against the Swedish government in cases where children have been separated from their parents by the state. Sweden passed similar, even broader, child-protection legislation in 1979 and extended the provisions last year.

Wilhelm insists that hitting Danish children must be outlawed. "We know that 85 percent of all Danish children have been hit before they are 12 months old," he says. "You cannot separate slapping or spanking from beating. Even if a parent only slaps, this attitude will influence the attitude of parents who do more.

"We think there is sure evidence a parent's attitude to violence is inherited, and all evidence shows a child beater himself has been beaten. No attempt has been made to remove the right of parents to beat children. Court practices have changed so that the right of spanking means two slaps on the face and without marks. That's all. Parents don't realize how limited their rights are. We want to stop the situation that legislation supports parents in hitting children

Among Wilhjelm's allies is Dr. Joav Merrick, a pediatrician and one of Scandinavia's leading experts on child abuse.

"In the golden 1960s we had a time when most children were healthy and happy," Merrick says. "The happiness turned sour and the golden age black. The family itself broke up. Women, who once could choose between a car and a pram, found themselves out of work, forced back

"Half the population of Denmark is working itself to death, and the other half is unemployed. This leads to frustration. Most parents who hit their children are normal people overreacting. About 70 percent of the population thinks it is okey to spank. There is a need for politicians, locally and nationally, to concern themselves with these problems and take initiatives to better the living and well-being of all children. If we tallied the correct figures for the number of child abuse cases per year, it would run to 20,000, more than I ever imagined." The population of Denmark is 5.1 million.

Erik Ninn-Hansen, the justice minister, rejects the proposal to abolish spanking. He told the parliament: "I am strongly opposed to the state mixing itself in this way into the family's personal affairs, and I must warn against the tendencies involved in the proposal."

At the moment the legislation rests in a committee, where a child's right of separation from his parents remains the major focus of criticism. Wilhjelm feels that provision would give the family a better chance to settle its conflicts before permanent damage and permanent separation

"In Denmark today when a child is in a critical family situation, he can go to the Crisis Center in Copenhagen, but that center must inform, first, the police, second, the parents and, third, the social authorities. Even if the doctors and social workers feel the child should remain outside the home for a brief time, the parents fetch the child immediately. We feel a separation period of three days to two weeks would give the proper time to mend the crisis."

Now, While the Game's Afoot

by Craig Claiborne and Pierre Francy

EW YORK - Over the years, we have been amused by various foods that home cooks - even those of special accomplishment - find intimidating or inhibiting. Among them are wild

In this category, we place both furred and feathered game, such as venison, quail, wild duck and more. The preparation of wild game can be basically the same as for most meat and poultry. If the game is young and tender, it can be roasted or braised, sauteed or fried in precisely the same fashion as its cultivated counterparts, be they chicken or chops or roasts, with or without the bone.

There are some cuts of game that demand the use of a marinade, which serves two purposes. It tends to make the meat more tender before cooking, and it adds flavor.

The decision of whether to marinate game will depend to a great extent on the animal's age. The recipes outlined here are good examples of when the marinating is necessary and when it is not. The ragout of venison is made with cubes of deer meat that are blended with red wine, red-wine vinegar, vegetables and herbs, and are then allowed to stand two or three days before cooking.

We have it on the best authority - our own freezers - and the advice of acquaintances that there is an abundance of game, fresh or

Wojnilower Says Inflation May Quicken

WASHINGTON — Albert Woj-milower, First Boston Corp.'s chief economist, said Thursday that current signs that U.S. output is slow-ing while demand continues very strong means that inflation is likely

He told a conference at the Financial Executives Institute that one clear indication of strong demand was the lengthened delivery times reported by more than twothirds of corporate purchasing agents iast month.

Mr. Wojnilower also said interest rates were likely to increase gradually until the economy over-heats but would not affect econom-ic activity immediately.

Mr. Wojnilower said federal budget deficits are irrelevant in forecasting interest rates because the government's excess spending creates the large cash flow that companies are now having and ac-counts for their low volume of bor-

He also said: "The [short-term] rates we saw at the end of the sion are the lowest we can ever expect to see unless there is a deep-er recession," he said.

He said the current short-term terest-rate level of 81/2-9 percent is an aberration but that gradual rate increases on Treasury bills, of about % point a month, are unlikely to be fully matched by commercial rate levels because of increased competition following lifting of interest-rate ceilings.

Mr. Wojnilower said that because interest payments on funds borrowed in the United States are usually tax-deductible, real interest rates are 1-2 percent after inflation and are little changed from 20 years

Commenting further on the re-covery, he said, "We are moving ahead at an extraordinary and unsustainable pace which will lead to capacity problems in the future." But, he said, if increased demand can continue to be met by increased imports, the expansion could continue beyond 1985.

The dollar is likely to continue strong until the economy overheats, Mr. Wojnilower added.

Traders' Role Stymies EC Steel Plan

By Stephen Nisbet

BRUSSELS - A plan by the European Commission to more closely monitor competition in the European Community's steel trade has run into trouble over the role of private traders, community sources said Thursday.

They said steel company chiefs and the EC commissioner for industry, Etienne Davignon, had failed so far to agree on a formula for working out each company's share of EC national markets because part of the companies' output is sold to traders rather than directly to foreign customers, proportion of EC steel output sold through middlemen varied greatly from company to company and that the traders had considerable freedom in choosing their buyers.

The commission wants to require that EC steel being shipped across national borders be accompanied by a certificate stating its origin. which would help supply more accurate data on trading patterns.

Sources said the steelmakers obtheir control. Mr. Davignon's idea pulsory financial deposits.

Industry sources said that the is that persistent offenders could be penalized with a cutback of production quotas. Mr. Davignon is to meet again with representatives of the Eurofer lobbying group Friday in an attempt to find common ground before ministerial talks scheduled for Wednesday,

To Clean the Chesapeake

FAIRFAX, Virginia — Jacques Cousteau, the French marine explorer, encouraging efforts to clean the polluted Chesapeake Bey, has said the task may be forbidding, but it can be done step by step. Some estimates say the project would cost $1 billion over 10 years,

"What is being proposed is a formidable beginning for the long-term effort," Mr. Cousteau said at a conference on cleaning the bay. "We should not be terrorized by 45.03

We should not be terrorized by the size of the job. The only way we can overcome it is to convince peo-3390. pic, everyone involved, that the ac-tion is in their long-range interest."

It was the sixth episode of U.S. intervention in the foreign-exchange markets since President Ronald Reagan took office. A Federal Reserve Bank official de-scribed it Wednesday as "modest." The Reagan administration tries to avoid intervening in foreign-ex-- change markets, believing the open market should determine the value of a nation's currency.

In its report on foreign-exchange operations for the Angust-October period, the New York Fed said the yen purchases occurred Oct. 31 and Nov. 1. The Fed said it included purchases on the Nov. 1 date in its latest report because it was a cootinuation of an intervention begun during the quarter.

For the same reason, the Fed's September report for May-July said it had bought $254 million in lapanese yen and West German Deutsche marks from July 29 through Aug. 5.

Kuhn Agrees to Stay As Search Continues

Baseball Executive's Term Is Extended: Reagan Aide Reported to Decline Post

NASHVILLE Tennessee tract as commissioner Thursday to give their search committee additional time to find his replacement. Kuhn's contract was extended until next March 1. Last summer. in Boston, his contract was extended from its original expiration date of Aug. 15 to Dec. 31. Amid reports that James A. Baker 3d, the White House chief of staff, had turned down the job, it appeared the committee was having trouble finding a commissioner.

The committee chairman, Bud Selig, owner of the Milwankee Brewers called the latest extension a "transitory bridge" that "needs to be built at all times like this. Selig said the vote to extend Kulm's contract was unanimous.

Bob Wirz, a spokestran for Kuho, said the March I date was imposed Kuhn was in a closed-door meeting with the owners and not avail-

But in the last three seasons, laboring with knee and wrist injuries, he hit a total of only 27 home runs and then was drafted by only two clubs when he entered the free agent market last month

"You're seeing a different Dave Parker now," he said. "It was hard to break the relationships in Pittsburgh after 10 years. Russia Signs Protocol for Olympics

By Robert Lindsey New York Times Service

LOS ANGELES - The chairman of the Soviet National Olympic Committee, after a weeklong visit to Los Angeles, hinted repeatedly that the Soviet Union would participate in next summer's Olympic Games here, but he said the final decision would not be made until the spring.

While Marat Gramov, who is also chairman of the Soviet Committee for Physical Culture and Sports, refused again to make a firm commitment that his country would come to the Games, he and Peter Ueberroth, chairman of the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee, announced at a news conference Wednesday that they had signed a "protocol accord." The agreement covers a wide range of planning, financial and logistical matters regarding Soviet participation in the Games. "Somewhere around May 28, 1984, we shall hold a meeting of the General Assembly of the U.S.S.R.'s National Olympic Committee, and that is when and where we will take the decision as to participate," said Gramov. He was part of a 13-member Soviet delegation that spent a week inspecting facilities for the Games while enjoying some American-style wining, dining and shopping.

After a reporter asked if political factors would be involved in the process of the Soviet decision, Gramov answered through an interpreter: "The results will be available. If anyone wants to cover the General Assembly and to see for vourself how democratic the process is, we guarantee you free and unhindered access to the Soviet Union."

This remark came after Gramov had earlier criticized State Department regulations that prohibited a reporter for Tass, the Soviet news agency, from attending the news conference. The conference was held at a hotel in the heart of Southern California's aerospace industry, which is off limits to Soviet journalists.

A spokesman for the Los Angeles committee later blamed the Soviet reporter's absence on a misunderstanding. Under State Department rules, she said, the Tass correspondent could have accompanied the delegation anywhere it went.

Details of the protocol accord, which requires the Soviet Union to inform officials here of its decision by next June 2, were not made public. But Ueberroth said that among its provisions, the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee had agreed to process applications for 25 round-trip charter flights here by Aeroflot, the Soviet airline, and for a Soviet cruise ship to be moored in Los Angeles or Long Beach Harbor during the Games.
The accord noted that Soviet officials preferred that their athletes be housed at UCLA, rather than at the University of Southern California.

Navratilova, Jordan Gain Final

Shriver and Garrison Fall in Australian Open

MELBOURNE - Ninth-seeded Kathy Jordan survived a slow start and swept into the Australian Open final against Martina Navratilova with a 7-6, 6-1 victory Thursday over Žina Garrison.

Navratilova, the No. I seed, advanced to her third straight Austrahan final by defeating Pam Shriver, 6-4-6-3.

Jorgan experienced difficulty with Garrison, a fellow American, in the first set. Garrison, who troubled Jordan with her passing shots. led 5-2 and appeared to have the set all but won when she served at 5-3.

But Jordan started to move in behind Garrison's tentative second serves, taking the ball on the rise and repeatedly forcing her opponent onto the wrong foot. Jordan forced a tie-breaker, which she

In the second set Jordan kept the pressure on Garrison and broke her serve in the second and sixth games with her sliced approach shots off Garrison's weak second delivery.

Jordan was much too aggressive for Garrison, who surrendered the second set with a string of unforced errors in 13 minutes.

Navratilova took only 59 minutes to defeat Shriver before a nearcapacity crowd of 8,000. The only match she has lost this year was against Kathy Horvath in the French Open.

Navratilova moved into the semifinals by defeating Io Durie of Britain, who surprised the crowd and Navratilova on Tuesday when she took a set from the champion before rain interrupted play. But Navratilova got her service back into gear Wednesday and crushed Durie, 4-6. 6-3, 6-4. Shriver entered the semifinals by defeating Carling Bassett, a Canadian teen-ager, 6-0. 6-1.

There were only two service breaks in the Shriver-Navratilova match, but Shriver was constantly pressured by Navratilova's deep volleys and control of the net.

Shriver lost the first set in 33 minutes. Navratilova's service got wobbly in the first few games of the second set and Shriver started lobbing to push the champion away from the net. But Shriver, under pressure, started to make unforced errors in the eighth game.

The match was Navratilova's 17th victory in 20 encounters with

Running Nun in a Class of Her Own

SAN FRANCISCO - She's the running nun, and that might not be so remarkable except that she is 54 years old, holds the world record for her age class in the marathon and has become the oldest person ever to qualify for the U.S. Olympic trials.

Sister Marion Irvine of the Dominican Sisters of San Rafael started running five and a half years ago when she "felt a need to use up some pent-up energy" and recalled her niece's efforts to get her to jog.

Sister Marion said she had been training for seven months to qualify for the Olympic trials. Her close friend and tunning partner, Lolly Hess, a nursing California, said that when Sister Marion crossed the finish line on Sunday, "she just burst out and said, 'I did it. I did it. I can't believe it. I did it.' And then she

THE ENTHUSIAST: A Life of Thornton Wilder

By Gilbert A. Harrison. 403 pp. $19.95. Ticknor and Fields, 383 Orange Street, New Haven, Connecticut 06511.

Reviewed by Thomas Quinn Curtiss

CCO UR TOWN is the most popular American play since WY ican play since "Uncle Tom's Cabim" was dramatized. Statistics indicate that it has been acted somewhere on the globe every evening since its 1938 Broadway premiere. It remains in top demand in the Samuel French play catalog, favored by professionals and amatours. Probably the mail-room staff of some far-off embassy is tackling it tonight.

The public image of its author, Thornton Wilder, has been faint. He was long a wellknown name, but he never became a public character as did his contemporaries Ernest Herningway and F. Scott Fitzgerald. He shunned personal exposure as far as possible and was only on the front pages when he won Pulitzer Prizes and when he undertook a walking tour across Europe with Gene Tunney just after Tunney had won the world heavyweight boxing championship.

Wilder maintained that no literary person of serious intent had his biography written during his lifetime. That was for athletes, mountain climbers amd movie stars. He died in 1975 and only now has the first complete biography appeared. It has been worth the wait. Gilbert A. Harrison, assembling a vast fund of infor-mation, has withen it with skill, sympathy and enlightening speculations. In his title he has hit on the mot juste for his subject. Enthusiasms are what made Wilder run.

Wilder was a complex personality, to some degree a split personality, being simultaneously an aesthetic adventurer and a rigid moralist. Gregarious, he made close friends of chance acquaintances, delving into their lives and problems and offering advice. Then he would retire to meditate and write in solitude in remote hideaways. He was almost weirdly learned on innumerable subjects and wore his learning lightly, transforming it into stimulating discourses on the lecture platform, in drawing rooms and in barrooms.

In 1918 Thornton served in the Coast Guard, then entered Yale. On his graduation he won a scholarship to the American Academy in Rome. Travel, wide reading and his mother's influence liberated him and he began to write. Economic pressure forced him to take to teaching and he was instructing at the Lawrenceville school for boys when his first novel, "La Cabala," fruit of his sojourn in Italy, came out. Its exquisite style was praised by reviewers but it had at the start only a modest sale. He was still at Lawrenceville when his next novel "The Bridge of San Luis Rey," made him internationally famous.

Wilder could not resist the invitation of Robert Maynard Hutchins (a Yale classmate and later president of the University of Chicago) to lecture on literature at the University of Chicago. According to this biographer those were his happiest years. As a celebrity, his company was sought by society matrons and by the night-club hostess Texas Guinan. He was the idol of his students and he began writing about Americans of his time "Heaven's My Destination," about a befuddied do-gooder, in "Our Town" about the inhabitants of a New Hampshire village, and in his shorter plays about ordinary folk.

Harrison describes the tempestions conflicts between Wilder and the volume "by genius" of Broadway, Jed Harris, when Harris genius of Broadway, Jen Harris, when harris produced "Our Town." Despite the violent backstage rows, the play pleased the siniteror, was awarded the Pulitzer Prize and has become an American classic. Next, Wilder adapted a farce by Johann Nestroy, shifting its some from Vienna to New York of the 1880, Direct ed by Max Reinhardt, it failed at first, has when it was revised as "The Matchinake" it had a prosperous run and was basis of the musical hit "Helio Dolly."

musical hit "Helio Dolly."

World War II took Wilder to Italy againwhere he served as an intelligence office.
While in the army his theatrical fable of mankind's destiny, "The Skin of Our Teeth," opened on Broadway to earn him another Pulitzer. An accusation of planarism presented him from winning the Drama Crines awaif as well. The charge was that he had fired the theme of James Joyce's Finnegans Wake. As that theme — the story of man's history sea through everyday happenings - is a variation on "Everyman" it is everyone's property Certainly there is no resemblance between the Wilder treatment and Joyce's oddly words, book. Wilder's own devices have often been imitated. That of "The Bridge of San Link 1 2: Rey" obviously inspired "Grand Hotel," "Dinner at Eight" and Harry Harvey's "School fer Eigenity," to mention but three, and the dention his novel about Julius Caesar's last days. The Ides of March" - an exchange of letter — has been copied again and again.

The last two decades of Wilder's life was less prolific. He traveled, seeking to find tranquil places in which to write. He tried Austril. rance, Switzerland and Italy. He hid away in Arizona and Florida. He published two novels. "The Eighth Day," which begins as a minder mystery and grows into a philosophica coasideration of the mystery of existence, and "The ophilus North," about the misadventures of do-gooder, rather in the vein of "Heaven's My Destination."

One laments that Wilder has gone without it in line.

Jeaving us more, but his novel. "The Bridge of San Lins Rey" continues to be republished in many languages and to enjoy large sales and "Our Town" is here for good.
